BEAUTIFUL LILIES

AND FRESH SEEDS AT

MRS. TAYLOR'S,

THE FLORIST

IN SOCIETY

The death of Mrs. Haalelea removes from the social circle of old Honolulu a most interesting personality. Her reminiscences, extending through the most romantic period of Hawaiian history, would fill a volume.

Married at the age of sixteen to a high chief in the time of Kamehameha III, and whose first wife (Kekauonohi) was grand-daughter of Kamehameha I, she became early in life identified with the royal family, and through the reign of five sovereigns was a prominent and attractive figure in court circles.

Mrs. Haalelea—nee Ululani Ena—was married at Hilo to Levi Haalelea, who was a member of the house of nobles and one of the Privy Council during the reign of Kamehameha IV. The honeymoon was spent at the old palace in Kailua, and from there Haalelea brought his bride to his home in Honolulu—the place known in those days as Holani Pa is now called Haalelea Lawn. The house was an exceptionally fine one for the times and to the young bride coming from Hawaii to Honolulu for the first time every thing was beautiful as a dream. The Queen Dowager, cousin of Haalelea, had her residence adjoining Holani Pa, and it was with her that Mrs. Haalelea spent much of her time. She kept a fine pair of horses and a white man for a driver—an unusual thing in those days—and would often send for her young friend at four o'clock in the morning and together they would drive to Moanalua, as far as Kapukaki, returning in time for breakfast. Those were the years of the celebrated fisheries, known as Kai-huopalaai at Honolulu, belonging to Haalelea. Thousands of mullet were brought at one time in whale boats and canoes for the market; a cart load of them being reserved for Mrs. Haalelea to distribute among the aliis and friends. On her arrival, all the old retainers, from Niolepa, Honolulu, Twile and everywhere brought their hoo-kupu to the young bride. With a conveyance of fifteen or twenty canoes, they would sometimes go fishing off Waikiki, for fishing was royal sport in those days, the chief entering into the sport with the humblest retainer. Mrs. Haalelea, too, often accompanied Prince Lot in his fishing expeditions. Her happy married life lasted but seven years. Mrs. Haalelea was a favorite with Queen Emma as well as with Queen Kalama, and as one of the ladies of the court, commanded the respect of every one. She had a love for books and poetry, and many beautiful verses in Hawaiian are from her pen. It was one of her dreams to translate Ben Hur, a book she greatly admired, into Hawaiian, and the work was partially done at the time of her death.

The ladies of St. Clement's Guild hope their friends understand that all exhibits at the Flower Festival, to be held on May 14, are free and will be gladly welcomed. There will be two processions. The first will consist of young children with decorated dolls, carriages, bicycles, wagons and wheelbarrows. A beautifully dressed doll can be won by a little girl for the prettiest exhibit and a suitable prize for a little boy. This procession will be formed at 2 o'clock and it is hoped will be well patronized. The other procession will take place afterwards and will consist of decorated carriages, carts, horses, bicycles, etc. Several prizes are offered, which will be put on exhibition down town this week. In addition to the above there will be a fish pond, a mystery table, doll table, where youthful mothers, not only can add to their families, but also can purchase garments for their old families. The flower table and candy booth are sure to be excellent and special ice cream will be provided for children at the rate of ten cents a plate.

On Friday Mrs. John A. McCandless gave one of her very pleasant luncheon parties followed by a few hands on pedro. In addition to the hostess those present were Mesdames Renton, Fuller, Frear, Jordan, Pearson, Wells Peterson, A. Wall, Blake, Taylor, Augur and Miss Newcomb.

The celebration of the silver-wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Schaefer on Friday was one of the notable society events of the week. In the early morning the couple were serenaded at their beautiful Nuuanu Valley home—"Rosebank"—by the Hawaiian government band. A number of friends called at this time to pay their respects. In the evening the residence was a blaze of electric lights and a large number of guests were present. The reception was held in the reception room which was beautifully decorated in green and white. From the arch of the alcove in which the couple stood hung a frail green and white screen of waxy-white stephanotis blossoms. A pretty wedding bell of white marguerites hung above the couple, and leading away from it were leis of marguerites. The windows were screened with malle. Vases of roses and marguerites completed a chaste decorative scheme. The music room was resplendent in yellow coreopsis grouped in bowls and vases upon small tables and about the fireplace. The dining room was in red. The parlor and broad lanais were reserved for dancing which was enjoyed amid the strains of music furnished by the Hawaiian quintette club. The punchbowl, with a fine brew of champagne and Rhine wine, was placed upon the rear lanai, where often the host and hostess presided. The guests were received in the hallway by Miss Irmgard Schaefer, gowned in white. Mrs. Schaefer wore a handsome gown of embroidered chiffon over taffeta silk. A minty collation was served in the breakfast room. Mr. Schaefer, Italian Consul, and Dean of the Consular Corps, was greeted by many of his brother consuls, as well as a large gathering of society folk.

The Misses Bradley of San Francisco, who arrived on the Korea, are the guests of Prince and Princess Kawanakoa.
